Bio:

Federica Victoria Caiozzo was born in Palermo in 1982 to an Italian father and a Polish mother.

At 17 she began studying classical guitar, which she soon abandoned to move to Rome, where she studied singing and music at the Saint Louise College of Music and she graduated from the European Institute of Design as a Sound Designer. She writes her own songs and records a demo under the stage name of THONY and an album as a singer with the Milanese band Jobi4 and she begins to tour Italy playing and singing in clubs. In 2012 she created the solo album "With the green in my mouth" and, while looking for a label to support her in printing and distribution, she was contacted by Motorino Amaranto, Paolo Virzi's production company, who entrusted her with the role of female protagonist for Virzi's film "Tutti i santi giorni", kicking off her acting career. For "Tutti i santi giorni" Thony also created the original soundtrack entitled "Birds". Since then, she has never stopped both as an actress and as a musician / singer / composer.
